

be best for the happiness of all parties, that, in that event, they should be erected into a separate and independent Republic. With the Canadian Republic on the one side, that of Texas on the other, and the United States, the friend of both, between them, each could advance its own happiness by such constitutions, laws and measures, as were best adapted to its peculiar condition. They would be natural allies, ready by co-operation, to repel any European or foreign attack upon either. Each would afford a secure refuge to the persecuted and oppressed driven into exile by either of the others. They would emulate each other in improvements, in free institutions and in the science of self-government. Whilst Texas has adopted our constitution, as the model of hers, she has, in several important particulars, greatly improved upon it.

Comparative:—ASHLAND, July 1st.—"Personally I could have no objection to the annexation of Texas."

Superlative:—ASHLAND, July 27th.—"Far from having any personal objection to the annexation of Texas, I should be glad to see it. . . . It would be unwise to refuse a permanent acquisition which will exist as long as the globe remains, on account of a temporary institution."

That is to say, positively opposed to annexation on the 17th of April—comparatively favorable to the project on the 1st of July—and superlatively anxious on the 29th, to woo back the alienated South and West, by the most distinct intimations that he is at heart as good a Texas man as the best; and that as soon as the little temporary obstacles interposed by Mexico are removed, he will be as glad as any to secure the "permanent acquisition."

It is "pleasing to observe the gentle smoothness of the transition here so rapidly and easily effected. One may sit down to the first of the three letters a decided foe to annexation, and rise up from the last its decided friend, with no other than a very dim sort of idea how on earth he got round there. Mr. Clay's anti-Texasism, so stern and stately at the outset, in its progress from the one point to the other, affords an interesting illustration of the poet's line, growing, with the development of the summer elections,

"Fine by degrees, and beautifully less."

How much further he may yet go, remains to be seen. As Mr. Clay appears to be much in the epistolary vein of late, (on all subjects except the Blair letter), probably we shall before long have another similar favor to acknowledge. We hope so. These nervous letters of explanation and deprecation sent out by every day's mail, are a sure sign that a candidate feels himself fast sinking—sinking—sinking. The Louisville Journal, (his special organ), in publishing it, says, that it lays it before its readers "as the latest expression from the great statesman on this interesting subject"—the latest bulletin from Ashland. This would seem to imply that another may ere long be expected. We only entreat Mr. Clay to pause a little while—only a little while—and allow us to "Catch ere she flies the Cynthia of the minute"

From the Providence (R. I.) Republican Herald. Splendid Galaxy of worth and talent.

It is very seldom, indeed, that any multitudinous meeting there is any such display and demonstration of moral force as there was at the mass meeting on the 4th in this city. Among those who have distinguished themselves by moral worth and greatness, and who have been honored by their fellow-citizens with the highest places of trust and honor, who were either present at the meeting or sent letters with marked approbation and approval of the objects of the call of the meeting, were the following: two Presidents of the United States, Andrew Jackson and Martin Van Buren; five governors of independent States, Governors Fairfield, Woodbury, Hubbard, Morton, and Van Buren; two democratic candidates for the gubernatorial chair now before the people, Hon. Silas Wright, of New York, and Hon. George Bancroft, of Massachusetts. The first stands at the head of the United States Senate in point of intellectual greatness, and equal to any in moral worth. The second is not only a sound statesman, but the most accomplished scholar and historian in the country. We particularly commend to the Algerines his letter to the meeting. There were also senators who now belong to the Senate of the United States: Hon. James Buchanan, Hon. Silas Wright, Hon. Levi Woodbury, Hon. Charles G. Atherton, and Hon. John Fairfield. There were also ten members of the present House of Representatives of the United States, viz: Hon. Moses G. Leonard, Hon. George Rathbun, Hon. Preston King, Hon. Robert Dale Owen, Hon. John B. Weller, Hon. Charles S. Benton, Hon. J. Carey, Hon. William S. Hubbell, Hon. Edmund Burke, and Hon. R. P. Dunlap. Among those who have held, and now hold, judicial stations, may be mentioned Hon. Levi Woodbury, late chief justice of New Hampshire, Hon. Marcus Morton, late one of the judges of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, and the Hon. Pliny Merrick, who now fills a judicial station with singular ability on the bench in Massachusetts. Among the most efficient and accomplished officers of the late war, who honored the meeting, was Gen. John McNeil. There were also present eighteen soldiers of the revolutionary army, whose names we published in our last. Besides all these, there were hundreds and thousands of distinguished strangers who honored the meeting, judges, members of the bar, members of the State legislatures, all in high standing in public life and in the estimation of their fellow-citizens, and upwards of five thousand ladies and more than thirty thousand citizens, who manifested, one and all, the strongest sympathy for the objects of the meeting, and paid the strictest attention to what was said by the speakers for upwards of four hours. It was a glorious triumph of the democracy of Rhode Island. Let no man, after this, say Gov. Dorr is not sustained by the moral power of the nation. He is sustained; and we want no better proof than the torrents of indignation pouring upon the Algerines from every quarter. Thomas Wilson Dorr has committed no crime; on the contrary, his Roman firmness and lofty demeanor before the court that tried and condemned him to a felon's cell, when innocent, was beyond all example in this country, and beyond all praise. His forbearance towards his political enemies, his respect to the laws, and his patient submission under circumstances of the most aggravated character, entitle him to the glory of martyrdom, in sustaining those great principles which a Washington drew his sword to maintain, and for which a Warren and a Montgomery sacrificed their lives. His name in all time to come shall stand among the "noble army of martyrs" in the cause of human rights, and will be honored and revered by every true American heart, and his praise shall dwell upon every American tongue. For his enemies, being judges, could find no law by which to condemn him; and therefore, like the conspirators against the life of the Daniel, caused one to be enacted for the occasion; and hence the "firm decree" of Darius, by which a Daniel was cast into the lion's den, and the "Algerine act" of Rhode Island, by which Thomas W. Dorr was condemned to a felon's cell, had the same origin in jealousy, malice, and revenge! and both are entitled to the same immortality of infamy in the history of legislation and oppression!

We conclude this article by recommending to our Algerine readers to read the 6th chapter of Daniel. They will see the parallel between the conspiracy against the life of Daniel and the conspiracy against Dorr complete. God grant that the termination of the one may be as glorious as the other; and we have no doubt it will be. Dorr's enemies cannot even now sustain themselves but by "ball cartridges" and proscription; and even this power must soon give way to the moral force which is now dashing against it from every section of the Union.

The Plebeian Tracts.
NOTICE TO DEMOCRATIC ASSOCIATIONS, CLUBS, AND COMMITTEES.—In consequence of the increased demand for these popular Tracts, we have reduced the price from $2 50 to $2 per 100, and $20 per 1000. They are able written, and completely explode the sophisms of the modern "Junius." They should be largely ordered by our Democratic friends throughout the country. No Democrat should be without them. All orders sent to the Plebeian Office. Remittances in bills of specie-paying bank, accompanying the orders, will be received.
